I. INTRODUCTION

Indonesian society consists of various ethnic groups, and each ethnic group has a culture with its own customs. Each ethnic group has a unique culture, which distinguishes it from other ethnic groups in the territory of Indonesia. Each ethnic group in Indonesia has its own customs. Their own culture, for example the Minang tribe has a traditional rumah gadang, the Toraja tribe has a traditional tongkonan house and the Javanese tribe has a traditional joglo house. Cultural diversity due to the many ethnic groups... can also be seen in traditional clothes, language, traditional cuisine and different art forms for each tribe. Asep Dadan Wildan (2018).

In the implementation of marriage in Indonesia, it must always be adjusted to the traditions and customs in which the individual or community lives. So, do not be surprised if you often find very unique and different traditional ceremonies including the marriage in them. The marriage ceremony between one region and another has its own uniqueness. This uniqueness can be seen from the implementation of the wedding ceremony which has its own meaning for the people who live it. For example, there are events and ceremonies before the marriage is held or before the wedding ceremony is held, usually in several regions in Indonesia they carry out several activities such as delivering something to complement the wedding ceremony which will take place the next day.

However, with the current development of times and technology, the cultural traditions in society have undergone many changes and are not even implemented anymore, but there are also many parts of society who do not easily let go of their old culture, they are people who understand well what has been believed and implemented by their ancestors from generation to generation.

Based on the writer's preliminary observations in the field, Depati niniek mamak said that one of the people who is still carrying out its cultural traditions is the Pancuran Tiga village community, Keliling Danau District, Kerinci Regency, Jambi Province. This village still respects one of their traditions, the Kincauw nganta tradition.

The researcher chose the Nganta kincauw tradition as the study to study because in general, almost all village communities in Kerinci Regency were supporters of the Nganta Kincauw tradition, each village carried out the Nganta Kincauw tradition during the pre-marriage period. However, over time, the level of public knowledge has developed very advanced. These changes may be caused by external factors in society. Most of the Kerinci people have interacted with other areas where people's lives can be said to be modern so that people have started to carry out cultural transformations towards modern ones, other Kerinci Regency communities such as Semerap and Pulau Tengah villages they no longer implement/ know this tradition of hantaran.

Starting from the various explanations above, the researcher wants to describe and analyze the Nganta kincauw Tradition. Through the research "The existence of the customary Nganta Kincauw Tradition Pancuran Tiga Village, Keliling Danau District, Kerinci Regency, Jambi Province" will reveal the existence of the pre-marriage Nganta Kincauw cultural tradition in the community of Pancuran Tiga Village, Kerinci Regency, Jambi Province.

Marriage for mankind is very sacred and has a sacred purpose as well and cannot be separated from the provisions stipulated by religious law. Marriage is not solely to satisfy lust, but to obtain calm, tranquility, and mutual nurturing between husband and wife based on love and affection.

Every society, no matter how simple it is, must have its own culture in the marriage procession, which means that it has values or norms that apply, because of the values that live in society regarding marriage, the community does not only use Law Number 1 of 1974 concerning Marriage, however, also uses customary law. The tradition of Nganta Kincauw is to deliver food / food or consumption ingredients needed for a wedding ceremony that is delivered by the man to the woman who will carry out the marriage.

The Nganta Kincauw tradition is carried out through a series of processes, starting from the preparation, implementation and final stages of Nganta Kincauw. The way the people of Pancuran Tiga Village still maintain the Nganta Kincauw tradition until it still exists today is by obeying the customary law of the Pancuran Tiga community which is still strong, although this is not written, this is the reality of social law that occurs in the life of the people of Pancuran Tiga Village. In general, the people of Kerinci used to be supporters of the Nganta Kincauw tradition, every village in Kerinci implements the Nganta Kincauw tradition during the pre-marriage period. However, with the times, the level of public knowledge has developed very advanced. These changes may be caused by external factors in society. Most of the Kerinci people have interacted with other areas where people's lives can be said to be modern so that people have begun to carry out cultural transformations towards modern ones. The Nganta Kincauw tradition is starting to be abandoned, this tradition has been replaced by an amount of money which is considered by the public to be more practical.

The persistence of the Nganta Kincauw tradition in Pancuran Tiga Village is because the people of Pancuran Tiga Village as a community supporting the Nganta Kincauw tradition still believe in the values and meanings that they believe in and are contained in this Nganta Kincauw tradition. The Nganta Kincauw tradition is the customs and traditions of the local community. This tradition is also related to people's behavior. According to Koenjaraningrat, in customs there are cultural values, in Nganta Kincauw there are also values, such as the values of mutual cooperation, a sense of togetherness, and other values. This is what will later serve as a guideline for the local community.

The people of Pancuran Tiga Village are actually still in the traditional community group, even though the area is not isolated and the technology used in life is no longer primitive. Traditional society is a society that upholds their ancestors and upholds their customs. This is in line with the habits of the people of Pancuran Tiga Village who uphold their customs, one of which is to maintain the Nganta Kincauw tradition.

In Nganta Kincauw, there is also a very close kinship relationship between relatives. Strauss said that modest societies are usually dominated by kinship systems, and their citizens interact within them based on a symbolic system that determines their attitudes towards at least three classes of kin, namely because of blood relations, because of marital relations, and because of heredity. Koenjaraningrat. (1987. pp. 213-216).

Traditional societies generally hold the view that carrying out the traditions inherited from their ancestors in the form of life values is an obligation, a need, and a pride. This is in line with the habits of the people of Pancuran Tiga Village who also view that carrying out the Nganta Kincauw tradition which is a legacy of their ancestors and contains life values is an obligation, pride and a need for the local community.
With the existence of the Nganta Kincauw tradition, a sense of help and togetherness can bind kinship. Through the Nganta Kincauw tradition, it will tie the relationship between family members because in this Nganta Kincauw tradition, family members will gather and gather to attend, witness, and help families who will carry out the marriage. It is in this situation that the Nganta Kincauw tradition functions to strengthen social solidarity in the social system of the Pancuran Tiga community.

The Nganta Kincauw tradition has values that are very beneficial to the people of Pancuran Tiga Village. These values are used as guidelines for society in behaving so that they can be maintained until now. The Nganta Kincauw tradition is a cultural heritage preserved by the people of Pancuran Tiga Village. Because Nganta Kincauw is a hereditary legacy from previous ancestors that must be preserved and has its own value and meaning, the people of Pancuran Tiga Village still maintain it today.

The Nganta Kincauw tradition in Pancuran Tiga Village is not something new. The Nganta Kincauw tradition is a habit that has lived for a long time and has become a tradition in which people define their world, express feelings and give judgments, and interpret their actions.

The Nganta Kincauw tradition essentially means uniting the two families who will carry out the marriage. Marriage not only unites the two individuals who are going to marry, but also the two extended families of the bride and groom who are getting married. This can be seen with the cooperation in preparing kincauw for the smooth running of the wedding ceremony to be carried out, the respect of women in receiving kincauw delivered by men, eating, chatting, singing Kerinci folk songs, and so on. Everything is reflected in this Nganta Kincauw tradition.
